TRIBUTE, TRADE AND POWER: AN
HISTORIOGRAPHICAL STUDY OF MWATA KAZEMBE’S
KINGDOM BEFORE 1890

BY

MELDAD L. CHAMA

A dissertation submitted to the University of Zambia in partial fulfillment of the requirements of the Degree of Master of Arts in History.

The University of Zambia

Lusaka

April 2012
I, Meldad L. Chama, do hereby declare that this dissertation represents my own work; it has not been previously submitted for any degree at this or any other university; and does not incorporate any published work or material from another dissertation.

Signed: ...........................................

Date: ..............................................
All rights reserved. No part of this dissertation may be reproduced or stored in any form or by any means without prior permission in writing from the author or the University of Zambia.
This dissertation of Meldad L. Chama is approved as fulfilling the partial requirements for the award of the degree of Master of Arts in History by the University of Zambia.

Signed: ...................................  Date: ......................................

.......................................  ......................................

.......................................  ......................................

.......................................  ......................................
ABSTRACT
This study examined the way historians explain the concept of power in pre-colonial Mwata Kazembe’s kingdom by using tribute and trade. Considering historians deal in multiple causes, this in itself was the limitation of the study because it did not consider any other forms of explanation of power. However, it should be noted that the study did not imply that tribute and trade were the only and major causes of power changes in Mwata Kazembe’s kingdom.

This study revolved about the understanding that since explanation involves what is explained and what is used to explain, the use of tribute and trade in explaining power should clearly demonstrate the connection between tribute and trade, on one hand, and power on the other. Thus, the study examined the way historians explain the role of tribute and trade in pre-colonial Mwata Kazembe’s kingdom; and the nature of explanations that use tribute and trade in explaining power in the kingdom of Mwata Kazembe before 1890.

For this study, textual analysis was the major method of analysing secondary and primary data. Although historiography mostly involves analysing secondary data, some major sources used by historians writing the history of Mwata Kazembe’s kingdom were scrutinized to express and simplify the author’s historiographical views; and to show the basis of historical explanations and interpretations that connect tribute and trade to power in the works of different historians overtime.
Dedicated to my grandparents, Joseph Chishinkilwa Luswili (late) and Albertina Nshinka Luswili; and to my aunties Beauty Chishimba Luswili (late) and Priscilla Chibamba Luswili.

For all those times. Thank you.
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I thank my supervisor, Professor B. J. Phiri for his dedication and guidance during the course of this study.

I am also grateful for the fiscal and moral support I received from my mother without which, this study could not have come to fruition.

Aunt Nkandu Luswili, Mwape Clementina and my fiancée Maria Sakala were always supportive and came through to meet my emergency needs. Keep smiling. I salute the entire Luswili family for encouraging me from the beginning to the end. I can only say epashili pakuleka.

Research and writing are sometimes lonesome endeavours, but the friendship of fellow M.A. history students in the 2010/2012 intake: Vytalis Chavwanga, Boyd Mwanabayeke, Theresa Tonga, Monde Sililo, Miyanda Simabwachi, Alice Banda and Margaret Banda will be unforgettable.

I also take this opportunity to thank the librarians and archivists at the University Of Zambia main Campus and Institute for Economic and Social Research, the Missionaries of Africa Library and Archives in Bauleni, and the National Archives of Zambia. Your valuable help and hospitality made the stress during research bearable.
CONTENTS

Title ..............................................................................................................................................i

Declaration ......................................................................................................................................ii

Abstract .........................................................................................................................................iii

Dedication .......................................................................................................................................iv

Acknowledgements .......................................................................................................................v

Contents ..........................................................................................................................................vi

Introduction .....................................................................................................................................1

Chapter One: Historiography of Tribute in Mwata Kazembe’s Kingdom
Before 1890 .....................................................................................................................................26

Chapter Two: Historiography of Trade in Mwata Kazembe’s kingdom
Before 1890 .....................................................................................................................................51

Chapter Three: Conclusion: Tribute, Trade And Power: An
Historiographical Synthesis .............................................................................................................74

Appendix .........................................................................................................................................92

Bibliography .....................................................................................................................................100